The Reporting World War II conference is funded in part by Iron Mountain, which is undertaking the digitization of the Cornelius Ryan Collection at Ohio University's Vernon R. Alden Library. Cornelius Ryan was a journalist and the author of the Longest Day, which documented the history of Operation Overlord (D-Day), the opening of the Second Front in France on June 6, 1944.

Probable cause: The total loss of engine power for reasons that could not be determined. Contributing to the outcome was the student pilot's improper decision to conduct a solo cross-country flight at night, which resulted in the airplane being destroyed when it hit a wooded area that the student thought was an open field.
